

Admission for the Transnational Doctoral Programs for Leading Professionals in Asian Countries

Asian Satellite Campuses Institute (ASCI)

Nagoya University, Graduate School of Law, Department of Law and Political Science
Degree of Doctor of Laws (Comparative Law)

(April 2016 Special Admission for Laos, Myanmar and Uzbekistan)

I OUTLINE

1. Objectives

Through the "Transnational Doctoral Programs for Leading Professionals in Asian Countries", Nagoya University Graduate School of Law is offering a special research-based doctoral program which primarily targets government officials from selected Asian countries who have already completed a master's degree and wish to earn a doctoral degree in the fields of law or political science. This is a hybrid education program which links Nagoya University's main campus to satellite campuses throughout Asia that have been established specifically for this program. The program is unique in that it provides enrolled students an opportunity to deepen their knowledge and experience and work towards a doctoral degree without having to take time out from their career.

2. Eligible Applicants and Countries

Early and mid-career government officials and professionals who are both nationals of, and reside in the countries below and who are expected to play active roles as future national leaders:

Laos, Myanmar, Uzbekistan (3 countries in total)

3. Host Institution

Nagoya University, Graduate School of Law (GSL)

4. Maximum Number of Students Admitted

There will be several openings for students in the program each year. This will be determined each year by GSL based on the number and quality of applications and the availability of appropriate supervisors.

5. Fields of Study

Law and Political Science (For further information please refer to: <http://www.law.nagoya-u.ac.jp/en/faculty/>)

6. Details of Curriculum

(1) Basic Concepts

The program aims to assist young professionals to develop specialized knowledge and skills, and the ability to conduct original and innovative research in the fields of comparative law and political science. Through this program, it is hoped that students will further their careers and play important leadership roles in their respective countries.

Support is provided to students through day-to-day research guidance both at the satellite offices and from Japan via video conference and other distance learning tools. Intensive lectures, seminars and research guidance sessions will also be conducted both in the student's country and in Japan.

(2) Criteria for Obtaining the LL.D. (Comparative Law)

The doctoral thesis must meet the following criteria:

- Constitutes a contribution to the discovery and resolution of theoretical and practical problems in the field of comparative law or political science.
- Uses mainly comparative law and comparative political science methods. However, in the case of international relations specialists, even concerning analysis of the functioning of international documents and international institutions, it is permissible to consider the possible applications for domestic law and politics.
- Presents analysis of relevant research trends and frames and argument on the basis of Japanese or English sources. This applies even where the thesis draws primarily on materials in the language of the home country of the student.
- States a research question, addressed in the thesis in a well-argued and well-structured manner.
- Shows originality in the progress of the research and comparisons.
- Answers anticipated criticisms in methodologically sound manner.

(3) Program Duration

In order to graduate, the student is expected to have spent three years in the LL.D. program. The student must also submit a doctoral thesis in English after receiving the necessary supervision in doctoral research, as well as pass an examination of the submitted dissertation by their supervisory panel.

(4) Language

Lectures and other guidance will generally be conducted in English.

(5) Main Features

- The program is designed for students who are capable of carrying out research on an independent basis.
- The student is expected to visit their respective local satellite office on a regular basis, where they will be able to consult with local academic staff and access research resources and facilities. Access to video conferencing facilities is available at the local satellite offices for communicating with the GSL academic staff.
- The student will be assigned one academic advisor and two sub-advisors from among the GSL faculty members to provide supervision and advice on research methodology, research progress, argument development and dissertation completion.
- The advisor will travel to the student's country once a year to provide intensive lectures on the relevant subject(s) to the student.
- A highly qualified academic support team based in Japan will regularly engage with students via video conference and/or e-mail to assist in the development of academic skills and research design to help enable the student to complete his or her degree in close consultation with the advisors.
- Once a year, the student will be required to go to Japan to attend intensive seminars with his or her advisor and sub-advisors and to present an annual research progress report. These presentations will be open to the broader GSL faculty and will provide the student with an opportunity to receive comments and additional advisory input from other researchers and scholars.

7. Tuition Fees

Students will be fully exempted from admission fees and tuition fees for the standard duration of the Program.

8. Financial Support

This program offers financial support to students during their visits to Nagoya University for the intensive supervision seminars provided by their supervisors and the academic support team.

(1) Stipend (living expenses while in Japan)

A stipend of 75,000 yen will be paid to the student for every 14-day period (or part thereof) in Japan, commencing from the date of the student's arrival in Japan for the purpose of intensive supervision seminars. This stipend will be paid in cash upon arrival at the Nagoya University campus.

(2) Stipend (travel expenses)

Nagoya University will cover the cost of an economy-class airfare (return) from the international airport nearest the student's home address to Chubu Centrair International Airport for students attending intensive supervision seminars in Japan. Students must personally bear the costs of travel from their home address to the nearest international airport, airport tax, airport usage fees, any special tax charged on the flight, and domestic travel costs within Japan. (The "student's home address" shall in principle be the address given on the application form) .

(3) Accommodation while in Japan

Accommodation for the duration of each intensive supervision seminar will be provided for the student.

9. Commencement of Program

1 April 2016
